Supporting Your Child's Development. One Step at a Time...

This month our teachers are working on turning in the curriculum for the next couple of months. LPW teachers actively participate in creating a curriculum that fits each individual child in their room. They master curriculum choices through research, observations and past history of activities children enjoyed in their classroom. As educators, its such a joy to see the process and outcomes of something we create specifically for our kiddos. Keep an eye out to see what your child enjoyed!

Focus on Fun

September is known for back to School. It's a wonderful time of year when many new friends join us. We will be focusing on welcoming new friends this month and CLASSROOM RULES.

Organizing classroom rules is extremely important to setting a tone for the group. Our older age groups play a part in helping create classroom rules. Do you have home rules at home? This is a great opportunity to have a family meeting at home where parents and kiddos can have discussions on what rules are good to have in the home. This helps us partner as teachers and parents on expectations at school and the importance of having rules to create a safe and welcoming space for everyone. Stop by the office to ask if you would like some resources to help you create a healthy home rules list.

Play...Teach...Love

What I love about teaching is getting the chance to make impacts on the lives of the children I teach! I also love that no 2 days are the same, its constantly changing in the classroom, with new experiences and challenges daily. The children are also always changing and growing right before our eyes and knowing that I am helping to shape them into the people they become is amazing! Lately my favorite activity to do with my kiddos has been covering our tables in butcher paper and letting them doodle their little hearts out!
